Annie is a motivated, curious, and results-driven professional with over two decades of experience in education, leadership, instructional design, and workforce development. She has a proven record of leading teams, managing projects from concept to completion, and designing educational strategies and curricula.

Her professional commitment is to leverage leadership skills, instructional design principles, learning theories, project management skills, and educational technology to deliver world-class educational experiences that engage and empower learners. Her blend of experiences, skills, and passions places her in an excellent position to support Aging Wisdom colleagues, clients, and partners in getting maximum value from their learning journeys.

In addition to her interest in education and learning, Annie is an ardent hiker and lover of all things outdoors — whether it's exploring the mountains on foot in the autumn, spring, and summer or snowboarding, snowshoeing, or Nordic skiing in the winter, she spends as much time as possible in the mountains.
